
Definition of a “PREVENTABLE” Accident

According to Dictionary.com Preventable is defined as to keep from occurring. The National Safety Council’s definition of a preventable accident is: An accident in which the driver failed to do everything reasonable to prevent it. Defensive driving means, “Driving to prevent accidents in spite of the incorrect actions of others, and in spite of the adverse conditions”. We have reviewed hundreds of accidents and found some that were deemed “nonpreventable” when they were clearly preventable. The usual mistake seems to be in assigning “fault” rather than preventability. A driver can be technically free from fault, yet may have been able to avoid the accident. Unless you are driving defensively (to prevent being involved), it may be only a matter of time before you are involved in an accident.

- Non-Collision Such as overturning, jack-knifing, or running off the road
